Affectionately inscribed to:

KATHERINE ELEANORA GREEN BARKER.

FOREWORD

Considerable care has been exercised to make this an accurate and complete record of names and dates. Nevertheless, readers may detect errors or omissions. If so, kindly notify the undersigned in order that undistributed copies may be revised.

In the case of married couples, the names of the mate carrying the Barker blood line always appears first, and in CAPITALS.

The sympathetic cooperation and encouragement extended to me in the preparation of this record has been so general that it would seem unfair to mention anyone by name. Therefore, my grateful acknowledgments are hereby tendered to all who aided in the work.

Old Barker House.

House built by Joseph Franklin Barker (The First) and his sons, in Goochland County, Virginia, about 1870 or earlier, and occupied by the family until the year 1882, and from then until 1897 by his son William Ashton Barker and family. In this house the following grandchildren were born:

William Johnston Mallory (M.D.) (August 25, 1874).

Clara Johnson Barker (July 25, 1883).

William Warren Barker (January 15, 1885).

Myra Ellen Barker (June 12, 1887).

Joseph Franklin Barker II (December 4, 1888).

also

Bernice Virginia Layne (February 24, 1898),

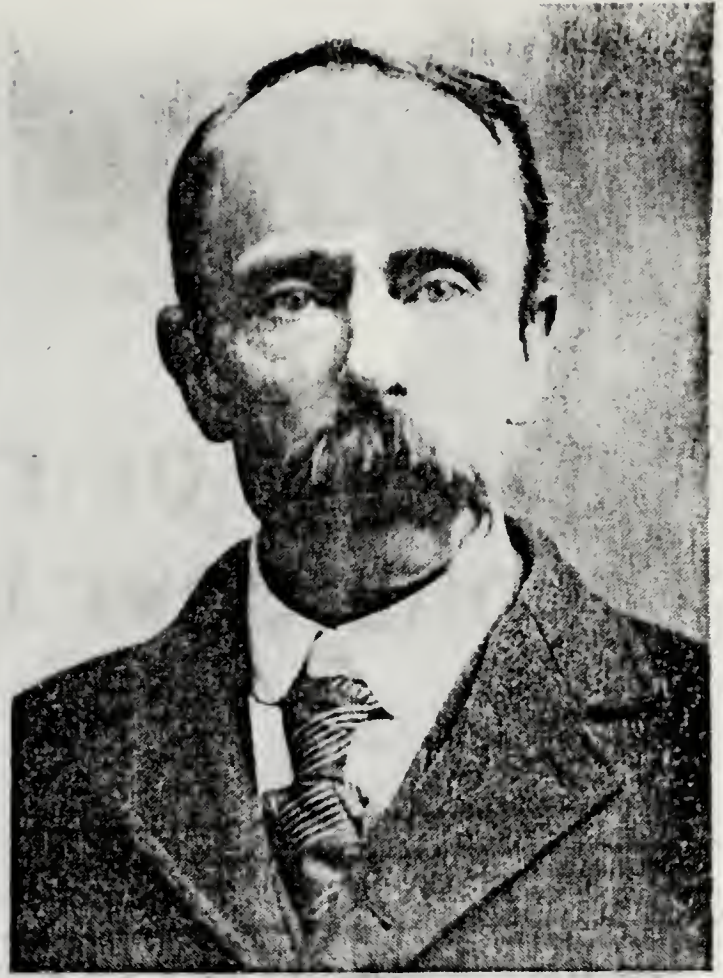

now wife of Joseph Franklin II.

This house was situated on an elevation about 100 feet above the level of the creek (a branch of Beaverdam creek) which flowed nearby. A spring, or more properly, "The Spring", was at the foot of the hill, rather near the creek level, and all water for household purposes, whether drinking, cooking, or laundry, was "toted" up the hill by hand in buckets (red cedar with brass hoops). One or more of these buckets was always sitting on a shelf just outside the door on the right as you go in. In the bucket, or hanging on a peg, was a drinking "gourd", either a real gourd with its own natural handle, and the top sawed off, or a cocoanut-shell gourd with a red cedar handle. On the hard dirt floor of the porch was a "wash bench" with basin, soap, and towels.

In the left of the picture is seen a small portico, which was over the "front" door, where formal callers entered and departed. The vine on it was usually of the woodbine variety, and afforded a home for a family of wrens. The original roof was of wooden shingles, handmade.

BIOGRAPHICAL

JOSEPH FRANKLIN BARKER (The First), so far as we can now learn, was never photographed, neither was his wife. And they were never in a financial position to employ an artist. None of their children are now living, and their portraits exist only in the memory of their grandchildren.

Joseph Franklin was somewhat more than six feet in height, and rather lean of build in his sixties. On a long face he wore a neat chin beard, with a clean shaven upper lip. To the day of his death he carried a full head of wavy hair, which changed from grey to white in his latter days.

He served as an artilleryman in the Confederate Army in "Captain Leake's Company". While in this service, his wife, with seven children ranging in age from infancy to 12 years, were living somewhere in Goochland County. How they lived is not recorded; but live they did.

He was a carpenter and builder, expert in the use of the old hand tools, the woodsman's axe, the broadaxe, various planes, the adz, and the "frow", some of which are unknown to modern mechanics, but very important in the last century. He was a shoemaker in the complete sense, and would buy sole leather by the "side". With the help of his sons, he made a complete set of double wagon harness. He was a "fiddler", and played such old favorites as "Arkansaw Traveler", "Turkey in the Straw", and "Irish Washerwoman". The only "fiddle" we ever saw him use was made by himself, and to our unsophisticated eyes and ears, looked and sounded no different from a regular violin.

He built, probably about 1870, the house pictured on page 5, and lived there until 1882. It was located on land then owned by the Barrett family, and was about a mile, as the crow flies, north of the present State Route No. 6, midway between State Farm and Maidens. The building has long since disappeared and the site is overgrown with fair sized trees.

ELIZABETH ANN JOHNSON BARKER was a woman of diminutive stature, with dark, bright eyes, contradictory though that may seem, and a face that in youth must have been pretty, but in her sixties was a network of fine wrinkles. The gentlest of women, she yet had a pithy phrase and a scornful sniff for persons or behavior that met with her disapproval.

To her husband, she was always "Betty", while to her he was "Old Joe" as distinguished from her son of the same name, whom she continued to call "Little Joe" after he had attained six feet. For the grandchildren, a visit to "Grandma's" was always a treat.

She was little known outside of her own family circle, but she raised five sons and three daughters to maturity, and their welfare was always her chief consideration. Speaking of a future life, she was heard to remark that no dwelling place would appeal to her if any of her "folks" were denied admission.

This couple, whose married life of 44 years was terminated only by the death of the husband, lived in the old home above mentioned until some time in the year 1882, when they moved to another location in the same County of Goochland, about ten miles further up river. The post office was called "Licking", at or near "Leake's Mill" and the home of Judge Andrew Leake. The house in which the Barkers lived was known as "Burnt Ordinary." Here some members of the family "farmed it" while others worked at what employment they could get, at home or abroad.

Then in the year 1887, following the undertakings of the younger generation, who were now the bread-winners, a move was made to "Granite" in Chesterfield County, Virginia. Here the husband died in 1892, and the wife in 1895. In their 68th year they had been baptized (immersed) in Pohick Creek by a minister of the Baptist Church.
